Onrus Outspan

We arrived early on Friday and discovered that some of our fellow campers had already arrived earlier in the week. The rest of the happy campers arrived and got settled in.

The geselsvuur got started after 19h00 and some red potion was provided by the hosts to get the Valentines' weekend started. Everyone gathered to catch up and by midnight the last of the group drifted off to bed.

Saturday morning, a few brave campers ventured to the tidal pool for a cold immersion, some took a quicker dip than others. Bbbrrr, very refreshing, very tingly and numbing but certainly got the blood pumping. For the rest of the day some ventured out to celebrate with their Valentine, while others sat and chilled at the campsite, enjoying the sun, each other's company and refreshments.

The Atkinsons, Rohlandts and Murray's got creative and decorated their vans to the theme of the day. Ron and Patrick got dressed up for the occasion. The two gents are always game and always willing to entertain.

At 4pm the group, dressed in red got ready for the Valentines' Day hunt. Participants were given a page with hints, which was designed to confuse them and it achieved that. While some spent the time trying to figure out the hints, most resorted to blindly go in search, doing their own thing, including bringing back items not part of the game. The actual aim was to find pictures of cupids and hearts. In the scheduled hour all cupids and hearts were found without any participants been harmed. There were a few close calls as people ran past one another. After the hunt, meals were prepared and people gathered around the fires later on in the evening after which people made their way to bed.

Sunday as usual, as last days go, was a beautiful day. We had our Indaba at 10h00 and just like that the weekend was over.

We enjoyed another lovely weekend with our Laager 21 family. The majority packed up and made our way home, while a few lucky ones stayed for another few days.

Thank you everyone

TIPS FOR CAMPERS

reminded everyone of one unlucky club member who managed to turn a simple weekend camp into a comedy of errors: first, they skipped asking for help when parking their caravan and nearly created a self-baptismal fountain by knocking off the tap, then took a tumble off a ladder and lost a spectacle lens, and finally managed to drop their meat off the braai, leaving everyone in stitches at their string of mishaps. He promised not to say that it was Mario!

MARTY

Lesley awarded Marty to Leon for all the hardwork.
